

Six Foreign Senior Research Administrators Visit Japan

The Tropical Agriculture Research Center invited six foreign senior research administrators to Japan in fiscal 1970.

The Center has been undertaking cooperative research works on agricultural technology in tropical Asia by sending its research staffs to a number of research institutes in the region as temporary and long-term visiting scientists who carry out research works in cooperation with scientists at these research institutes.

Called the Tropical Agriculture Research Program, it has so far been successfully operated and is supported by Asian countries on the basis of mutual benefit.

The purpose of the invitation was to hold discussions and exchange views between the Asian senior research administrators and staffs of the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry of Japan, including those of the Center, on various problems involved in the present activities as well as the future outlook of the research program.

The names of the guests, period of their stay and places of their visit are listed below.
